OLD POINT SHUT OUT.

That is What the Portsmouth's Did for the Visitors Yesterday.

Leonard did himself honor yesterday by allowing the Old Point team but two hits, and shutting them out, not allowing a man to cross the rubber.

This young gent possesses, to all appearances the art of deceptive twirling to a marked degree, and if his work yesterday is a fair indication of what he proposes to do when he gets down to work in earnest, he will prove to be to use baseball vernacular "a peach" and as such will be fully appreciated by the "rooters" of this city, who as every one knows are "true blue" and "dead game" sports, and plug for a favorite with all the ardor of their nature, which is always of the enthusiastic kind.

The game was interesting, clean and well played, as the score will show, and the battery work of the visitors was certainly of the gilt-edge kind. Fuller, who as soon as he took his position in the box was dubbed "his whiskers" but his knowledge of the science of pitching soon made him an object of interest and concern to the "rooters" and they were more respectful adding the "Mister" to "whiskers" and leaving off the "his".

The visitors whenever they had a chance displayed quite a talent for base running, and the fielding of the team was excellent, both the infield and out field accepting several difficult chances, with credit to themselves.

If the Portsmouth's it can be said in all sincerity and truthfulness, that it is in the pink of condition. Every man is a hitting aggregation, as well as a fielding one. The men run bases with speed and discretion and every one has an arm that can be relied upon. There is no question, but that Portsmouth has the most evenly balanced team she has ever been represented by. Manager "Pete" Weckbecker having used excellent judgment in his selection of his men, and knowing that the team is strong, Portsmouth people are confidently expecting them to play steady ball, ball of the winning kind and this the men in return for the confidence reposed promise they will do. See the score:

TRIED TO BREAK IN.

Friday night, about 11 o'clock, a negro named Joe Perdue went to the stables on Middle street, next to Butler's row. One end is fitted up as a bedroom, and is occupied by a colored man. Perdue went to the door and tried to force an entrance. Failing to get in he bursted out a sash and started to enter through the window. An officer was sent for. Friday afternoon Mr. Hardy Duke, a well-known trucker, was on his way home, and when passing the corner of Queen and Chestnut streets, he met a team coming in an opposite direction. There is a bridge at this point, and both teams attempted to cross at the same time. The bridge was so narrow that one wheel of Mr. Duke's buggy ran off and caused the buggy to turn over, throwing him out and cutting his head quite badly; also his hand.
